Why Disclose

- To ask for job accommodations
- To receive benefits or privileges of employment
- To explain an unusual circumstance
Using JAN

How to Disclose
The individual must let the employer know:
- an adjustment or change at work is needed for a reason related to a medical condition

To request accommodation, an individual:
- may use "plain English"
- need not mention the ADA
- need not use the phrase "reasonable accommodation"
Using JAN

How to Disclose
Verbally or in writing, tell the . . .

- Employer
- Supervisor
- HR representative, or
- Other appropriate person

Job Accommodations

Practical Solutions  •  Workplace Success
Using JAN

Purchasing or Modifying Equipment or Products
Using JAN

Example

An electrician's helper with PTSD needed to attend periodic licensure trainings. He had difficulty taking effective notes and remembering information in the meetings.
Using JAN

Accommodation

The employee was provided an iPad with apps that would record the trainings. This enabled him to listen to the trainings as many times as he needed. He was also provided training on how to use the device and the apps.
Using JAN

Example

A public policy administrator who worked from home had difficulty remembering who was on conference calls, who was speaking, and what questions were being directed to him.
Using JAN

Accommodation

The administrator was accommodated with a meeting application on his computer that had a chat function so that questions could be typed into the screen for him to read. He was able to better understand the questions when he could read them for himself, several times if necessary. He would also be able to see the names of the persons asking the questions.
Using JAN

Making Work-site Accessible
Using JAN

Example

An office worker was having difficulty with balance and coordination and walking steadily due to a brain injury. The employer had observed her falling a couple of times on the way to the printer/fax room and restroom.
Using JAN

Accommodation

The employer provided handrails to/from the employee’s workspace and the common areas. They also provided her with her own printer and fax, and changed her workstation set-up so that she could access files and other materials and equipment without having to move around too much.
Using JAN

Example
A new purchasing clerk with a traumatic brain injury is having difficulty walking from the parking lot to his workstation in a manufacturing plant.
Using JAN

Accommodation
The employer gave the employee a reserved parking spot close to the worksite.
Using JAN

Job Restructuring
Using JAN

Example
An employer required that all employees work overtime. An employee with a brain injury asked to be excused from overtime because of fatigue and exacerbation of symptoms.
Using JAN

Accommodation
None. The employer denied the request stating that overtime is an essential function.
Using JAN

Example

A member of a cleaning crew with seizures is restricted from working on a ladder. He can perform all of the functions of his job except for the task of maintaining the overhead lighting fixtures.
Using JAN

ACCOMMODATION:

The job tasks of a second crew member include cleaning a small kitchen in the employee’s lounge, which is a task the first crew member can perform. The employer switched these specific tasks performed by the two crew members.
Using JAN

Modifying Schedule and Allowing Leave Time
A court employee was having difficulty with emotions after returning to work following a TBI. She was diagnosed with pseudobulbar affect (PBA) where she would have outbursts of uncontrollable laughter at seemingly inappropriate times.
Using JAN

Accommodation
The employee asked that her co-workers be educated on PBA so they would better understand what could be viewed as inappropriate laughter. She was also accommodated with extra breaks to help manage her stress, a temporary lightening of her workload, and a flexible schedule to allow her time for counseling and doctor appointments.
Using JAN

Example

An employee working in a state corrections facility has difficulty waking up due to new medications she has been prescribed. She has had increasing symptoms of PTSD with the approaching ten-year anniversary of the traumatic event.
Using JAN

Accommodation

Because of her inability to get to work on time and attend work at all some days, her employer provided her with an accommodation of leave to help her manage the side effects of the medications.
Using JAN

Modifying Policies
Using JAN

Example

A file clerk with an anxiety disorder uses a service animal to help her deal with stress in the workplace.
Using JAN

Accommodation

The employer modified its "no animal" policy and allowed the service dog in the workplace.
Using JAN

Providing Readers and Interpreters
Using JAN

Example

A veteran who recently returned to the workforce in a customer service position has (PTSD) and a (TBI). After disclosing his disability and requesting reasonable accommodations, his employer provided him with a cubicle close to an exit, with his back facing a wall. This helped to alleviate some of his stress, but he still had difficulty with memory and emotional outbursts.
Using JAN

Accommodation

The employer obtained a job coach through the Department of Veterans Affairs to assist the employee adjust to his new position. The job coach worked with the employer and employee to develop a customized form for taking notes, a system for organizing the employee's workspace, and suggested the employee e-mail his supervisor with questions so he will have written responses. The job coach also helped incorporate breaks into the employee's day to walk and do breathing exercises to help reduce the likelihood of outbursts.
Using JAN

Reassignment
A retired Army medic had difficulty managing stress in the workplace due to her PTSD. Her stress intolerance was intensified when she heard the emergency medical helicopter arrive and depart from the hospital where she worked as a nurse.
Accommodation
The nurse was reassigned to a vacant position on a unit that was far from the heli-pad so she rarely heard the helicopter. During times when the helicopter staff would practice maneuvers in her area she was allowed to work a flexible schedule.

JAN's Searchable Online Accommodation Resource (SOAR) system is designed to let users explore various accommodation options for people with disabilities in work and educational settings. These accommodation ideas are not all inclusive. If you do not find answers to your questions, please contact JAN directly. The staff of experienced consultants is happy to discuss specific accommodation needs in a confidential manner. Start your SOAR search.

Step 1: Select the Impairment

JAN receives thousands of accommodation-related inquiries per year. The SOAR system allows users to obtain accommodation ideas. JAN consultants compile these accommodation ideas and post them to SOAR. If you need additional information on an accommodation situation that has not been posted, or if you would like to discuss the information presented here, contact JAN.

Step 2: Select the Limitation

Epilepsy / Seizure Disorder

Skip Intro

Epilepsy is a chronic, neurological condition characterized by recurrent seizures. A seizure happens when abnormal electrical activity in the brain causes an involuntary change in body movement or function, sensation, awareness, or behavior (CDC, 2012). Seizures can vary from a momentary disruption of the senses to short periods of unconsciousness or staring spells to convulsions, and some people have only one type of seizure, while others have more than one type (CDC, 2012). The term epilepsy can be used interchangeably with the term seizure disorder; epilepsy is a chronic condition and cannot be transmitted from person to person (CDC, 2012). Having a seizure does not necessarily mean that a person has epilepsy. Only when a person has experienced two or more seizures is she considered to have epilepsy (NINDS, 2011). Epilepsy affects about 2.3 million adults in the United States, with approximately 150,000 new cases reported yearly (CDC, 2013).

Accommodations are evaluated on a case-by-case basis. We have compiled a non-inclusive list of limitations that result in common accommodation situations. In addition, you can find more information at JAN’s A to Z Web page at: http://askjan.org/media/abo2.htm.

Please select the limitation that corresponds with the individual needing an accommodation below.

- Individual has difficulty with cognitive impairments (memory, time management, stress management)
- Individual has difficulty with motor impairments (driving, balancing/climbing, fatigue, safety)
- Individual has difficulty with sensory impairments (photosensitivity, see/hear/communicate)
- Individual has difficulty with attendance/absenteeism or personal care

Step 4: Choose the Accommodation

Attendance / Absenteeism

Seizure activity can affect a person's attendance at work.
- Allow employee to remain on the job after a seizure when possible
- Provide flexible schedule
- Modify an attendance policy
- Provide leave while the employee is adjusting to medications
- Work a straight shift instead of rotating shifts
