Connecting Veterans to Social Security Disability Benefits: A Key Component in Ending Veteran Homelessness

Jen Elder, MSc

Connecting Veterans with Social Security Administration (SSA) disability benefits is a critical step to increasing income stability for Veterans and their families, as well as providing health insurance for those who do not qualify for Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) health care. Veterans may be eligible for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) in conjunction with, or as an alternative to, VA disability compensation. Veterans may also use the Medicaid and Medicare health benefits that come with SSI/SSDI to supplement VA health services.

The Issue

Who Is a Veteran?

For the purposes of this issue brief, we use the definition of “Veteran” set by federal statute as a “person who served in the active military, naval, or air service, and who was discharged or released therefrom under conditions other than dishonorable.”¹ As discussed in this report, while the discharge status or duration of service of an individual who served in the armed forces may impact their eligibility for participation in VA or other grant programs, it does not impact their eligibility for SSA benefits.

What Is the Need?

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) estimates that 57,849 Veterans were experiencing homelessness on a single night in January 2013, accounting for over 12 percent of all homeless adults. Eight percent of Veterans experiencing homelessness (4,456) were female.² The number of homeless Veterans decreased in January 2014 to 49,933 adults. Income stability remains critical in sustaining these gains and in opening up new housing opportunities for Veterans with disabling conditions.

By providing outreach to Veterans about SSA benefits and assisting eligible adults through the SSA application process using the SOAR model, we can increase income security and housing stability, and help end Veteran homelessness by 2015.

In 2010, the United States Interagency Council on Homelessness released Opening Doors: Federal Strategic Plan to Prevent and End Homelessness, which put forward the goal of ending Veteran homelessness by 2015.³ The report noted that half of Veterans experiencing homelessness have severe mental illness and over half have other health issues. In addition, Veterans experience high rates of traumatic brain injury (TBI), post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD),

Disability Benefits Available for Veterans

SSA Benefits

SSI is a needs-based program for individuals who are aged (age 65 or over), blind, or disabled, and who have limited resources and income.

SSDI provides benefits to individuals and certain family members who are insured by Social Security through contributions made through payroll taxes. Eligible individuals cannot work at a substantial gainful level due to a disabling condition. SSDI eligibility does not take into account assets or resources.

VA Benefits⁴

Disability Compensation, also known as service-connected disability, is a monetary benefit paid to qualifying Veterans who are disabled by an injury or illness that was incurred or aggravated during active military service.

Pensions are needs-based cash benefits paid to low-income wartime Veterans who have limited resources and assets and who are over 65 or have a permanent and total non-service connected disability.

and sexual trauma, which contribute to difficulty in maintaining employment and housing.

Improving access to mainstream benefit programs, such as Social Security disability benefits, is one of the objectives identified in Opening Doors. By providing outreach to Veterans about SSA benefits and assisting eligible adults through the SSA application process using the SOAR model, we can increase income security and housing stability, and help end Veteran homelessness by 2015.

Veteran Eligibility for Disability Benefits

The definitions of disability and application processes are different for SSA and VA disability benefits. Veterans may be concurrently eligible for both SSA and VA benefits and may begin receiving SSA benefits while they are waiting on a VA benefit decision.

Definition of Disability for VA

For service-connected disability benefits through the VA, the applicant must show that they have a disabling condition that was “incurred or aggravated by their military service.”⁵ This could include conditions that arise after military service has ended but are related to circumstances of service. For instance, a Veteran may be eligible due to a diagnosis of PTSD, arising from a traumatic event occurring during military service, even if the condition was not diagnosed while the individual was on active duty. VA disability benefits also require a discharge under other than dishonorable conditions. The compensation rates paid for service-connected disability are on a graduated scale based on the degree of a Veteran’s disability, ranging from 10 to 100 percent in 10 percent increments, and their number of dependents.

For non-service connected VA disability benefits, also known as pensions, Veterans must have limited income and assets and be either elderly (age 65 or older) or have a permanent and total disabling condition that does not have to be related to their military service. Veterans may also be eligible if they have been approved for SSI or SSDI. Similar to service-connected disability, the Veteran must have been discharged

⁴. For this issue brief, we will only focus on these two benefits from the VA. For additional information on other VA benefits, or for assistance in applying for VA disability benefits, please visit the Veterans Benefit Administration at: <http://benefits.va.gov/benefits/> under conditions other than dishonorable. Applicants generally need to show that they served for at least 90 days, with at least one day of service during a wartime period. Those who entered the military after 1980 may have longer service requirements.

Definition of Disability for SSA

SSI and SSDI do not require the Veteran's disability be linked to their military service, do not take into account a Veteran's discharge status, and do not pay on a graduated scale. For SSI and SSDI, the Veteran needs to show:

1. They have a physical or mental health condition resulting in functional impairments that limit their ability to work at a substantial gainful level.
2. This condition has lasted, or is expected to last, 12 months or end in death.

Substantial work is quantified yearly by SSA in a monetary figure known as substantial gainful activity (SGA). In 2014, the SGA amount is $1070 per month. Individuals must show that, due to their disabling condition, they are unable to earn above this amount.

Another difference between the two disability programs, is that while the VA may pay partial benefits, there are no short-term or partial disability benefits available from SSA. This does not mean that an individual cannot return to work if they receive SSI/SSDI, but that their disability is considered "total" in that they cannot work at a substantial level.

Veterans may apply for both VA and SSA benefits concurrently, and those applying for SSI must attest they have applied for any VA benefits for which they may be eligible. The decisions are made by separate organizations, and eligibility or ineligibility for one benefit will not affect eligibility for the other.

How SSA and VA Benefits Impact One Another

Veterans who receive a partial VA disability rating and limited VA benefits, may also receive SSA benefits. For cash benefits, the receipt of VA benefits will affect SSI and SSDI differently.

Supplemental Security Income

Since SSI is a needs-based program, additional income from VA benefits will affect the cash benefit amount. SSA classifies VA benefits as "unearned income," since it does not come from paid employment. As such, it will be deducted dollar for dollar from the SSI federal

SSA Expedited Processing for Veterans

Veterans may qualify for programs from SSA that expedite disability decisions:

100% Permanent and Total Veterans Initiative

In March 2014, SSA introduced a new initiative to expedite the processing of applications from Veterans who have a 100% Permanent and Total (P&T) disability rating from the VA. While these applications are given high priority, it does not guarantee approval for SSI or SSDI. To receive expedited processing, Veterans should identify themselves as a "Veteran rated 100% P&T" when initiating the SSI/SSDI application and should provide the VA rating notification letter to SSA.

Wounded Warriors

Veterans who received disabling mental or physical health injuries while on active duty on or after October 1, 2001, are eligible for expedited SSI/SSDI application processing through the Wounded Warriors initiative. The injury does not need to have occurred during combat operations. When initiating the SSI/SSDI application, to receive the special processing, Veterans should inform SSA that their injury occurred while on active duty.

payment amount, after a general exclusion of $20. All SSI recipients are eligible for this exclusion, where the first $20 of earned or unearned income is not counted against their SSI payment.

For example, Paul receives partial VA benefits of $400 per month, and has been approved for SSI. Figure 1 illustrates how the VA benefits will affect his SSI cash benefit.

Monthly VA Disability Payment	$400
General Exclusion	- $20
Counted Income	= $380
Maximum Monthly SSI Benefit (2014)	$721
Counted Income	- $380
Monthly SSI Payment	= $341
Total Monthly Income (VA & SSI)	$741

Social Security Disability Insurance

By contrast, SSDI benefits are not affected by unearned income through VA benefits. In the following example, Jane receives partial VA benefits of $400 per month. Because she worked and is insured by the Social Security system, she now receives $850 per month in SSDI. Her VA and SSDI monthly benefit amounts are added together, as seen in Figure 2.

Monthly VA Disability Payment	$400
Monthly SSDI Payment	+ $850
Total Monthly Income (VA & SSDI)	= $1250

Health Insurance

A common misconception is that everyone who has served in the armed forces will have access to VA health care services, administered by the Veterans Health Administration (VHA). Eligibility and enrollment for VA health services is dependent upon discharge status, duration of service, and the priority status a Veteran receives. Each Veteran who is eligible for VA health care is assigned a priority group from 1-8, with 1 being the highest priority group, which allows certain Veterans to enroll before others. Priority status takes into account factors such as the VA disability rating a Veteran receives, a Veteran's income, and period of service. Individuals who received a dishonorable discharge do not qualify for VHA services. As a result, eligibility for Medicaid and Medicare through SSI/SSDI is critical for these individuals to access health care.

Accessing Medicaid and Medicare through SSI/SSDI is also beneficial for Veterans who are eligible for VA health care. The VA does not bill Medicaid or Medicare for services; rather, Veterans may utilize Medicare or Medicaid to pay for services not covered by the VA. This may be beneficial for Veterans located in areas that have limited access to VA facilities.

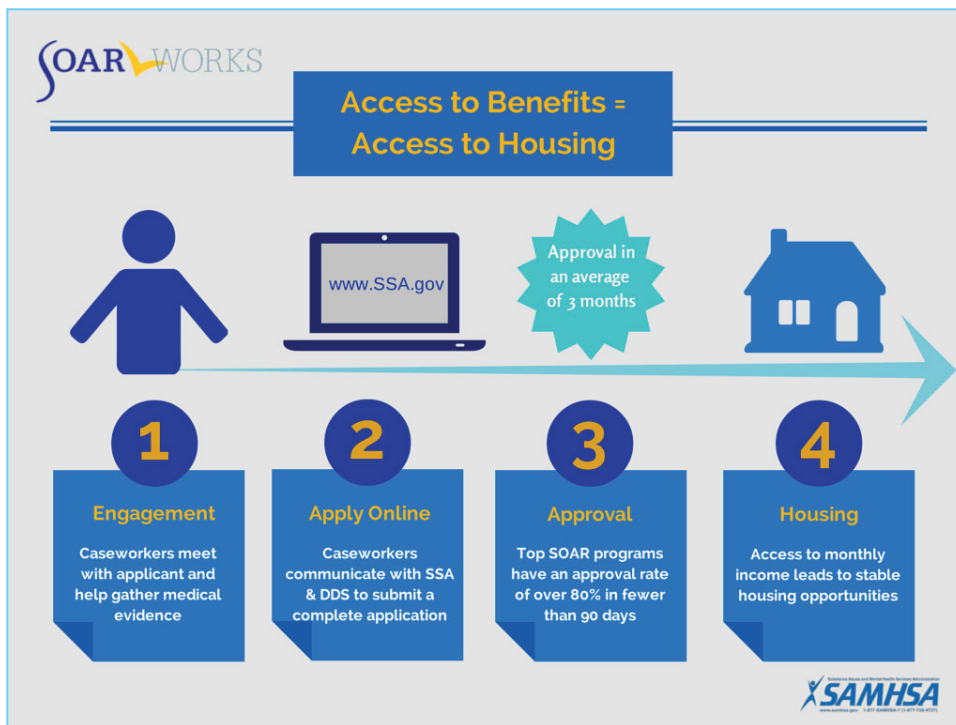

Veterans may apply for both VA and SSA benefits concurrently... The decisions are made by separate organizations, and eligibility or ineligibility for one benefit will not affect eligibility for the other.

Common Health Issues for Veterans

Research into Veteran homelessness indicates that common health issues include TBI and PTSD. When completing SSI/SSDI applications, it is important to be aware of symptoms associated with these conditions and to be able to document how they impact a Veteran's ability to function in four main areas: activities of daily living; social functioning; concentration, persistence, and pace; and episodes of decompensation, which can be documented as frequent hospitalizations, incarcerations, evictions, or job loss. The following sections provide a brief overview of TBI and PTSD, as well as useful evidence to gather in support of SSI/SSDI applications.

Traumatic Brain Injury

A TBI is a disruption of normal brain functioning that can be caused by a blow to the head; a penetrating head injury; or pressure waves following exposure to an explosion, also known as a blast injury. The Defense and Veterans Brain Injury Center (DVBIC) estimates there have been 294,172 medical diagnoses of TBI among U.S. Armed Forces from 2000 to 2013. Most of the cases (242,676) were classified as mild (concussion), with most service members returning to duty in an average of 7 to 10 days. However, mild TBI can still

When reviewing SSI/SSDI applications, examiners evaluate how these cognitive and behavioral symptoms impact the Veteran. They will examine any sensory or motor function impairments or epileptic seizures that have resulted from the TBI.⁸

Post-traumatic Stress Disorder

PTSD may be triggered by exposure to a traumatic event such as serious injury, actual or threatened death, or sexual violence. A PTSD diagnosis requires the presence of symptoms for longer than one month in four areas: intrusive thoughts or feelings about the result in long-term health concerns, such as headaches and issues with concentration, memory, and mood swings.⁶

Cognitive symptoms related to TBI involve impairments in concentration, memory, judgment, reasoning, and learning new concepts. Behavioral symptoms may include depression, anxiety, paranoia, irritability, aggression, confusion, emotional outbursts, and sleep problems. This list is representative of symptoms an individual may display, but is not exhaustive of all symptoms that may present with TBI. Further, TBI has been associated with secondary illnesses of dementia, Parkinson's, epilepsy, and depression.⁷

trauma; active avoidance of situations that may trigger traumatic memories; increased negative thoughts and mood; and increased displays of aggressive or reckless behavior, sleep disturbances, or hypervigilance.⁹

For SSI/SSDI applications, PTSD is evaluated using the criteria for anxiety-related disorders.¹⁰ It is critical to document how a Veteran's symptoms, such as panic attacks, compulsions, social isolation, or paranoia, are impairing his or her ability to function at home and work.

Useful Evidence

While we focus on TBI and PTSD in this brief, it is important to gather documentation about all mental

SOAR and VA Partnerships in Detroit

Detroit, Michigan utilizes a strong partnership between the VA and their Projects for Assistance in Transition from Homelessness (PATH) program. The PATH program is a formula grant administered by SAMHSA that focuses on conducting outreach to individuals who are experiencing or at-risk of homelessness and who have serious mental illness and/or co-occurring substance use disorders. In Detroit, an outreach worker from PATH serves as the authorized representative and collaborates with a VA social worker to complete all documentation needed for the SSI/SSDI application. The VA social worker gathers medical records from the VA to submit with the disability application and arranges for additional medical examinations as needed. This coordinated effort helps Veterans access SSA disability benefits, as well as helping them establish relationships with care providers.

and physical health issues a Veteran is experiencing. Individuals may be approved based on a combination of health conditions. Documents can include psychiatric evaluations, neurological test results, hospital or clinic reports, and evaluations from vocational rehabilitation programs. It can also be helpful to gather statements from past employers, family members, community workers, and any other individuals who may know how the Veteran's mental and physical health conditions impair their ability to work. Finally, it is important to include the military discharge papers (DD214) with the application, particularly if the Veteran is qualified for SSA-expedited processing. It is essential to note that, while the DD214 may list a mental or physical health reason for discharge, the DD214 is not a medical record or indication of patient treatment.

Increasing Benefits Acquisition for Veterans

Staff at organizations serving Veterans have a critical role in helping increase access to SSA benefits. Using the SOAR model, case managers nationally help individuals obtain SSI/SSDI an average of 100 days. For Veterans, obtaining income supports in 3 months or less will substantially increase their housing stability, and is key to reducing their future risk of homelessness.

Federal VA Staff and SOAR

In October 2013, the VA released a memorandum encouraging VA staff to assist with Social Security applications using the SOAR process.¹¹ This memo clarified the roles that federal VA employees can play and opened up opportunities for SOAR programs to collaborate with VA staff.

The VA specified out that employees can release VA medical records to Social Security, which is essential to the disability determination process. Federal VA staff can assist in gathering documentation, completing the SSI/SSDI application, and referring the Veteran to a SOAR representative if the VA employee is not able to complete the SOAR process themselves.

There are two aspects of the SSA disability process in which federal VA employees cannot participate: federal VA staff cannot serve as authorized representatives or representative payees. VA staff can be listed as contacts who can provide information about the Veteran, but the role of authorized representative, using the SSA-1696 Appointment of Representative form, should be filled by a community SOAR provider. This necessitates close collaboration with community SOAR programs. VA staff or SOAR providers can also connect the Veteran with representative payee services in the community.

Supportive Services for Veteran Families (SSVF)

SSVF is a federal grant program administered by the VA, whose stated purpose is “to promote housing stability among very low-income Veteran families who reside in or are transitioning to permanent housing.”¹²

A critical aspect of promoting housing stability for SSVF grantees is increasing access to income supports, such as SSI/SSDI. By utilizing the SOAR model, Veterans who are eligible for SSA benefits in SSVF programs can quickly access income, thereby supporting them in housing and minimizing SSVF grant funds used for temporary financial assistance.

A recent survey of SOAR and SSVF programs nationwide found that SSVF grantees are involved in SOAR in 44 of 52 states and territories. Further, 146 of the 319 individual SSVF grantees are actively engaged in using SOAR to help Veterans access SSA disability benefits.

For further information about the SSVF Program, visit: <http://www.va.gov/homeless/ssvf.asp>, email ssvf@va.gov, or call (toll-free) 1-877-737-0111.

Homeless Veterans’ Reintegration Program (HVRP)

The U.S. Department of Labor Veterans’ Employment and Training Service (USDOL-VETS) administers the HVRP grant, which funds job training and related employment services to help homeless Veterans re-enter the workforce. Access to SSA disability benefits can be critical in increasing stability for Veterans who are seeking employment. HVRP case workers have a pivotal role in documenting any employment supports a Veteran may need, as information about how someone struggles at work can be invaluable in an SSI/SSDI application. Further, after a Veteran obtains SSI or SSDI, they can utilize SSA’s work incentives to help support their employment.

For more information about the HVRP program, visit the USDOL-VETS website at: <http://www.dol.gov/vets/grants/hvrpnat.htm> or the National Coalition for Homeless Veterans, who provides technical assistance to grantees at: <http://nchv.org/>.

A Navy Veteran Finds Hope and Independence through SSVF and SOAR

Ray, a 53 year old, honorably discharged Navy Veteran, was recently released from federal prison and needed basic clothing, a pair of shoes, housing, and income. He struggled with pain in his back and knees, as well as depression and PTSD. He was quickly connected with the Homeless Services Network of Central Florida and the SSVF team at The Center for Drug-Free Living.

Ray attended SSVF employment classes and worked diligently with the SSVF employment specialist to find the right placement. He attended job fairs and employment seminars, and followed up on leads. There were many disappointing interviews and job searches. Finally, the right position was there, and Ray was hired to work in a breakfast restaurant on the food line. He was very proud at how far he had come.

Ray desperately wanted to work and have income sufficient to be independent, but unfortunately, his physical and mental health issues curtailed his ability to work full time. He slowly slipped into a depressive episode. While continuing to receive employment support from his SSVF employment specialist, Ray was referred to the SOAR Case Manager to evaluate the possibility of receiving Social Security disability benefits.

The SSVF SOAR case manager worked with Ray to compile and submit all the necessary information for a Social Security application, and within 90 days Ray was approved for disability! Not only would he be able to continue to work part-time, but he would receive SSDI income that would allow him to have income sufficient to reach his goals. With the assistance of SSVF and SOAR, Ray moved into stable, permanent housing and achieved independence for the first time in 11 years.

HUD-VASH

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) program provides permanent, supportive housing vouchers, as well as case management and health services, to homeless Veterans. While these housing vouchers and supportive services are key in reducing homelessness, it is important for Veterans to obtain income in order to remain stably housed. HUD-VASH case managers, knowing the supportive services a Veteran needs based on their mental and physical illnesses, are well-placed to provide critical documentation for SSI/SSDI applications. For more information about HUD-VASH, visit: http://www.va.gov/homeless/hud-vash_eligibility.asp

Summary

Veterans with disabling physical and mental health conditions may be eligible for cash benefits and health insurance through SSI/SSDI. Federal and community programs can assist Veterans by increasing their knowledge of available SSA benefits and using the SOAR model to help Veterans file for SSI/SSDI. Through this, Veterans can quickly obtain income security, which is key for housing stability and ending Veteran homelessness.
